4 guitars and 4 Germans

Posted 04-06-2010

No, this isn't a mathematical formula, but the German "Satori" quartet.

"Satori" quartet is one of Germany's modern guitar groups that have been in Armenia for the past couple of days. The young guitarists gave a concert today at "Lovers Park" in Yerevan called "Between music of the renaissance and now". Although the guitarists were presenting classical pieces, the sounds of the guitar made them more melodious and familiar to the youth.

Perceiving music as the expression of a modern cultural reality, in their concert, Vibke Rademacher, Karl Kristof Rensch, Matthias Giefel and Mikhail Zoyner included compositions that place high emphasis on the present by passing limits of innovation and presenting it in a new way.

The young Germans have performed in other countries of the region as well, but they say they really liked Armenia and hope that the Armenian audience will love them.

After the successful concerts in Gyumri and Vanadzor, the group gave a concert at "Lovers Park" where classical music is not heard too often.

"I have been here for rock concerts a couple of times. It is a little strange to listen to classical music at a park, but at the same time impressive because my main instrument is my beloved guitar," said one of the spectators.

"Satori" quartet was founded in Turin in 2008 and immediately began to give concerts. The "oldest" member of the group is 30 years old and the youngest is 20. The quartet's concerts in Armenia and Georgia are organized by the German-Armenian Society and Tbilisi's "Gyote" Institute.
